A PLUS Loan is one type of financial aid that allows the parents to borrow for their child's education. It is a legal obligation between you and the lender in which you, not your child, make a promise to repay the loan amount at a later date. You can borrow up to your child's total cost of attendance, minus any financial aid they receive. For example, if your child's cost of attendance is $14,000 and they receive $4,000 in financial aid from other sources, you could borrow up to $10,000 in a PLUS Loan for that year. However, as is always the case with loans, you should borrow only as much as you need.

You begin making loan payments 60 days after the final disbursement of the loan has been made. These payments can be suspended, if you qualify according to your lender guidelines.

The U.S. Department of Education is the lender of the loan and performs a credit check to determine your qualifications as a borrower.

The money from a PLUS Loan is sent directly from the federal government to GCC. The money remaining after direct college costs are paid is returned to you, not your child. If you want the student to receive the balance, you must provide GCC with a written request releasing these funds or make this request via the PLUS loan credit check application.

I also authorize GCC to credit the student's account with any Federal Direct PLUS loan funds to pay for educational-related purchases at the GCC Bookstore. This authorization can be rescinded at any time by contacting the GCC Financial Aid Office.
